Pioneers of Pilgarn

Stage 1.

Citizens who built this district between years 1887 and 1914

Reen, Cornelius: Reen owned a butchers shop in Southern Cross during the early days, marrying one of the Murphy girls. Reen's claim to fame was finding water 20 miles east of Southern Cross in 1890.

He was in charge of a party sent out to look for water at a time when Southern Cross was critically short. The soak that he found became known as Reens Soak and is still in existence today.

When Coolgardie was discovered the soak became the first night's stopover for gold seekers. The soak lost its importance when the railway went through a few years later. The name was also changed to Yellowdine.

Reilly, John: Editor and publisher of Southern Cross Herald newspaper, who died of typhoid in 1895. Reilly repeatedly plugged for better sanitation through his editorials, little knowing that he would become a victim, pointing out that filthy Southern Cross was contributing to the typhoid epidemic.

The paper was owned by his family, Reilly and Reilly of Northam, and closed upon his death.
Newspapers were important as the only way to reach the people before radio.
