Poems by Tony Bozich

an outback place

The hessian and timber of the time of the twenties is fraying and sagging, the windows are broken and the little old building is empty and still,
and the ancient great pepper trees dwarfing the building cast shadows at sunset, and up on the ridge toneless and sombre is the grey mullock hill.

They say a prospector who long ago died was the last to live here, an old retired soldier, but no one's too certain, I don't know his name, death came and took him and trace of him vanished beyond much discussion, and silence took over, silence and emptiness, and no one else came.

Did the wind cry so mournfully when he was still alive and the dust storms swirl tumbleweed, did he check doors and windows and light up the fireplace against Winter's cold, did he think on his boyhood, his family circle, the passage of years, and shut out the solitude by browsing of memoirs and souvenirs old?

Perhaps! But he's long gone, he and his furniture dispersed now forever, and the last of his keepsakes, papers and photographs heaven knows where,
and the fence is ramshackle, the footpath is vanished, the doorstep is broken, the building's deserted and the neighbouring houses are no longer there.

(the above poem closely based on Sir John Squire's 'Winter Nightfall')

after the dry

July the first, Winter in full swing, rain teeming down on streets and sweeping rooves, citizenry sheltering from the sting of freezing wind that streams through cracks and grooves.
On the verge a young woman fights to stop her skirt and umbrella flying high, hurrying darkness has lit street lights and soaked and pedalling furious a cyclist races by.
The sky is rent by scaring thunderclaps from lightning bolts that split the cloud, and a loosened tin sheet knocks and raps against the weathered fence wind bent and bowed.
Winter, glorious Winter's hit the wold, O welcome saving rain and wind and cold.

Leisure

What is this world if full of care we cant find time just to stand and stare?
We've come a pretty lousy way if fewer moments we can stay and admire Nature which made us and more and more our life is fuss, and instead of working less and less we're obsessed to acquire a tinsel mess, yet in less than a century of time all gone may be such rhythm and rhyme.
A poor life this if full of care we cant find time for a plainer fare.

(closely based on W H Davies' "Leisure")

one winter's day

I went to the kitchen sink, a small lizard was in there, it had avoided falling in the drink but there was no escape or shelter anywhere.
"Hello my little friend," I exclaimed, "I must help you get out," but it wriggled intensely, being untamed, and eluded any trick I laid about.
Wild creatures don't like human hands, for all they know they're enemies;
however, after failed initial gentle demands I cupped it without undue unease and took it to a spot outside where it could sunbask or hide.

Under the influence

As more brands turn to social media influencers to promote their product or service, it's becoming increasingly important for businesses and buyers to understand how the Australian Consumer Law (ACL) applies to sponsored content.

Influencers don't have to disclose any commercial arrangement regarding the products and services they promote and are free to express their opinions, but companies that have an arrangement with an influencer (either directly or via a third party) can be found liable for the claims that the influencer makes about their product or service.

If those claims are found to be false or misleading, it could leave the trader, not the influencer, liable to prosecution under the ACL.

An 'arrangement' doesn't necessarily have to be in the form of a formal contract or even involve money changing hands. A company providing free products to an influencer could be viewed as an 'arrangement' and this can create a potential minefield for businesses.

Companies engaging in this type of promotion should carefully monitor what the influencer is doing or saying to ensure they are not creating a false impression or being deceptive.

Consumer protection agencies can ask traders to substantiate any claims being made about a product or service, including those made by a third party contracted by the company. If a breach of the law is identified, penalties may apply.

Consumers who feel they have been misled by social media posts or by statements made by influencers can lodge a complaint as they would for any form of advertising or promotion, and if complaints are found to be valid, traders may have to offer refunds.

An exaggeration about the qualities of a product or service based on subjective opinions may be allowable depending on the circumstances. The line is crossed when the claim being made is a statement of a fact that is false and deceives the consumer.

Traders can be held responsible for public comments made by others on their social media pages which are false or likely to mislead or deceive consumers.

It may not be good enough to just correct the misleading comments by replying, as the response may not be sufficient to override the false impression created by the original comments. It may be safer to simply remove the comments.

Businesses, particularly those with a large following on social media, should ensure their pages are monitored not only during office hours but after hours as well, so any dubious content is addressed as quickly as possible.

Traders should establish clear 'house rules' on their social media pages, and block users who breach them, and monitor their pages to ensure any false or misleading public posts are removed as soon as quickly as possible.

NOTICE OF BAITING PROGRAM FOR WILD DOGS

The Eastern Wheatbelt Biosecurity Group advises that from January 1st 2019, heavy baiting programs (using 1080 meat baits) to control wild dogs will be carried out by Licensed Pest Management Technicians on Unallocated Crown Land to the east of the State Barrier Fence. In addition to 1080 baiting programs, technicians will be using foot hold traps treated with Strychnine to remove Wild Dogs that are currently impacting the livestock industry in the Eastern Wheatbelt Biosecurity Group region.

From January 1st 2019, the standard wild dog control methods will be ongoing and this may include setting of traps and dispersing of 1080 meat baits in the groups operational area.

The poison baits will remain toxic for a number of months or until substantial rainfall is received. People are advised to take care when working within or visiting these areas.

Warning signs have been placed where applicable on Unallocated Crown Land and main access roads.

Picnic sites and recreational reserves are not included within the baiting program; however, baiting may take place adjacent to such areas and domestic pets should be kept close and under control at all times.

1080 baiting is an integral part of the wild dog pest management program to protect livestock from death and injury caused by wild dogs.

Exercise caution to prevent your pets from being poisoned by 1080 baits.

If a wild dog is sighted, please report to the Eastern Wheatbelt Biosecurity Group immediately.

If poisoning occurs, contact a doctor or Poisons Information Centre (phone 13 11 26).

For further details please contact, the Eastern Wheatbelt Biosecurity Group on 0455 724 848 or ewbg@outlook.com.

Pioneers of Pilgarn

Stage 1.

Citizens who built this district between years 1887
and 1914

Parker, William: Parker came to Southern Cross in 1888 looking for pastoral country, and instead found gold. He was guided to the spot by his aboriginal guide who said there was a mountain of the stuff where he was born, and led him to Parkers Range 30 miles south of Southern Cross.

Parker worked his lease for a number of years and became a leading citizen in the town of Parkers Range which bore his name. He rewarded his faithful native by building 'a white fella railing' around his brother's grave.

Parker was quite vocal through the newspapers on how the country should be run, his brother being a politician. William Parker was a true pioneer who helped open up the inland of WA.
